"About a month after I started using Simultaneous Ring our PBX was down for two days. I got all of my calls on my cell phone, and my clients never knew we had a problem."

Jim Ange Sales Manager

Home of Simultaneous Ring™

Simultaneous Ring is a service that makes it easier for clients, friends, and family to reach you. With a Simultaneous Ring telephone number, one phone call rings all your telephones (dial line at work, cell phone and home office phone) at the same time. Whichever phone you answer gets the call. If you don't answer the call, callers end up in your chosen voice mail. Now you only have one place to check your messages.
